

Coping with Uncertainty in Everyday Situations (CUES) training workshops

Do you work with children diagnosed with autism experiencing anxiety?

The CUES© program is designed to address anxiety relating to uncertainty experienced by children and young people diagnosed with autism. This parent/caregiver group program focuses on addressing difficulties with uncertainty, providing parents/caregivers with strategies and tools to assist their child to develop a more flexible approach to uncertainty and reduce anxiety around uncertainty.

This two-session workshop will provide clinicians and autism professionals with a greater understanding of why uncertainty is a particular challenge for some children on the spectrum and how to deliver this group program in clinical settings for families whose children are experiencing these difficulties.

This training is designed for clinicians/autism professionals who wish to deliver CUES© in their service or practice.

What's involved?

You will be required to attend two training workshops. Following attendance at both of the workshops we will provide you with:

- The CUES© Therapist Manual (PDF)
- PowerPoint slides for the 8 therapy sessions
- All corresponding handouts and worksheets for parents (PDFs)
- A copy of the Uncertain Situations semi-structured interview (PDF)
- A certificate of attendance

After the second workshop we will send you an anonymous feedback form to get some feedback from you about the training to help us to plan for future sessions.

Where?

Via Zoom. Links will be sent to delegates following payment.

Cost?

$450 for the training and all of the materials.

September 15 and 22, 2022 (delegates must attend both workshops)
