

Paediatric Autism Communication Therapy (PACT) Training Course

CliniKids and the University of Manchester are offering PACT training for the first time in Australia

PACT is a training program designed for parents of young children with autism. It helps parents understand and communicate more effectively with their child by promoting the development of social communication.

Level One - Introductory training

A half-day e-learning program which covers the theory behind PACT and begins to introduce PACT concepts. Delegates must complete Level One training before beginning Level Two - PACT practitioner training.

Level Two - PACT practitioner training

4 half days of online training with a PACT trainer covering the core principles and the current evidence for PACT, demonstrating the model in use through video. The training also provides opportunities for practical application of the concepts through role play. Training is followed by 2.5 days of post course supervision and support to complete the post-course fidelity requirements.

Who can attend?

Allied health professionals, teachers, para-professionals, and other related service providers.
